

Object

Navajo (Diné) squash-blossom necklace, 1963. Arizona or New Mexico. Silver, turquoise, metal wire, 58.8 x 6.5 x 2 cm., National Museum of the American Indian, 25/7498; 257498.000

How we live—our culture—is reflected in the lessons and practices passed through generations. Navajo (Diné) people continue to reaffirm and strengthen culture through their language, their religious ceremonies, and their arts—such as the making of distinctive silver jewelry.