Article IX: In consideration of the advantages and benefits conferred by this treaty, and the many pledges of friendship by the United States, the tribes who are parties to this agreement hereby stipulate that they will relinquish all right to occupy any territory outside their reservation . . . but retain the right to hunt on any unoccupied lands . . . the said Indians, further expressly agree:

1st.

That they will make no opposition to the construction of railroads. . . .

3rd.

That they will not attack any persons at home or Travelling . . . or disturb any wagon trains, coaches, mules or cattle belonging to the people of the United States. . . .

6th.

They will not in future oppose the construction of railroads, wagon roads, mail stations, or other works of utility or necessity which may be ordered or permitted by the laws of the United States; but should such roads or other works be constructed on the lands of their reservation, the Government will pay the tribe whatever amount of damage. . . .

7th. They will make no opposition to the military posts or roads now established, or that may be established. . . .
