

Crow men wearing feather headdresses in parade formation. NMAI P22474

The Crow Nation was famous for having some of the largest horse herds on the northern Great Plains. Crow artists created elaborate horse regalia to honor horses. Mounted parades, such as the one here, were an important part of fairs, rodeos, and other events where the Crow and other Northern Great Plains Nations could proclaim their identity.