Biographical Note

The National Congress of American Indians, which describes itself as the oldest and largest American Indian and Alaskan Native organization in the United States, was founded on November 16, 1944, in Denver, CO. NCAI was intended to serve as a link between individual tribal councils and the United States government, by defining and helping to crystallize Indian thought on the administration of Indian affairs. The Congress also aimed to educate the general public about Indians, preserve Indian cultural values, protect treaty rights with the United States, and promote Indian welfare.

At the first convention, delegates representing fifty tribes ratified the constitution and by-laws, drafted resolutions determining the direction of NCAI policy, and elected the organizations' first officers, with Oklahoma Supreme Court Justice Napoleon B. Johnson (Cherokee) as president. The officers, as well as eight elected council members, formed the Executive Council. The Council chose the Executive Director; Ruth Muskrat Bronson (Cherokee) was the organization's first director, from 1944-1948. "Persons of Indian blood" could join the organization either as individuals or as groups. In 1955, however, the constitution was revised to restrict group membership to recognized tribes, committees, or bands, and to make the Executive Council chosen by tribal representatives. These changes gave control of the organization to governing bodies of organized tribes, rather than individuals. A further amendment that year created a five-member Executive Committee, headed by the president, which had all the powers of the Executive Council between council meetings.

Conventions have been held annually in the fall since the formation of the NCAI in 1944. Since 1977, mid-year conferences have been held in May or June of each year, to allow more frequent and thorough discussion of issues. The resolutions passed at these conventions are the basis for all policy of the Executive Committee and Executive Director between meetings. The conventions are also used for informational sessions and meetings of standing and special committees of NCAI. One or two-day workshops may also be held on special topics or Congressional issues of particular concern.

NCAI created a tax-exempt arm in 1949 to accept charitable contributions and apply for grants, the NCAI Fund, which soon changed its name to ARROW, Inc. By 1957, however, ARROW had split off to become an independent organization, and NCAI started a new arm, again called the NCAI Fund. In the coming decades, the NCAI Fund would obtain grants from sources including the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Department of Veteran Affairs, Indian Health Service, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Ford Foundation, humanities councils and others, which they used for conferences, workshops, publications, and other projects.

In its early years, NCAI fought for the recognition of land claims of Alaska natives, the enfranchisement of Arizona and New Mexico Indians, the equitable settlement of tribal land claims, and the right of Indians to select their own attorneys. The NCAI lobbied vigorously for an Indian Claims Commission Bill, which became law in August 1946. NCAI's lobbying efforts on behalf of this act set the pattern for the organization's future role in legislative matters: keeping member tribes abreast of proposed legislation and ascertaining their views, and maintaining a presence in Congress through lobbying and testimony.

Beginning in 1954, the threat of termination pushed NCAI into a period of increased activity. Although some tribes were ready to terminate their relationship with the federal government, much of Indian Country felt threatened by the government's new stated policy. NCAI therefore organized an Emergency Conference of American Indians for February 1954 to protest this new termination policy. An agreement was forged at the conference between the NCAI and the Bureau of Indian Affairs to work together toward slowly liquidating the BIA. The termination period of the 1950s and 1960s, while challenging, saw NCAI increase in confidence and political acumen.

During the 1960s, a number of other activist Indian groups sprang up and began to dilute the singular influence which NCAI had commanded. Newer, more militant groups often considered themselves at odds with NCAI, which was increasingly perceived as conservative. As the number of Indian advocacy groups grew in the 1960s and 1970s, however, NCAI actively partnered with other organizations, particularly the National Tribal Chairmen's Association (NTCA) and Native American Rights Fund (NARF), on a variety of projects.

Charles E. "Chuck" Trimble (Oglala Dakota) served as Executive Director of NCAI in 1972 until 1977, when he resigned to lead the United Effort Trust, a project designed to fight white backlash to Indian rights. NCAI spent most of the next two years trying to find another permanent director. In 1979, Ronald P. Andrade (Luiseno-Diegueno) joined NCAI and unfortunately found a group that was demoralized and underfunded. He was able to return the organization to good health but left in 1982. Si Whitman (Nez Perce), his successor, remained at NCAI for less than a year.

Suzan Shown Harjo (Cheyenne-Creek) became director of NCAI on May 1, 1984. Prior to taking this position, she had served as Congressional Liaison for Indian Affairs at the Department of the Interior during the Carter administration and as legislative liaison for the Native American Rights Fund, as well as working for NCAI during the mid-1970s. Harjo was also an active and published poet, as well as a frequent speaker at events around the country. The National Congress of American Indians was particularly active on Capitol Hill while Harjo was director, advocating for government-to-government status, the Tribal Government Tax Status Act of 1983, repatriation legislation, and economic development programs, among other issues. Harjo was herself very involved in the establishment of the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, DC.

The NCAI Fund was very successful in receiving grants during this period, although they were chronically short of operating funds. Some of their most active projects during this period were the Indian and Native Veterans Outreach Program (INVOP), Inter-generational Health Promotion and Education Program (IHPEP), Environmental Handbook and related educational seminars, Solar Bank, nuclear waste disposal and transportation information sessions, and voter registration.

For years, NCAI's operating expenses had been funded by the Ford Foundation and the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). In 1985, the director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, opposing the use of Federal monies to support outside organizations, began to block the payment for services due to the NCAI. This created a financial crisis from which the NCAI did not recover during Harjo's tenure, and it became the major issue for which she was not rehired in October 1989.

Following the 1989 Annual Convention, Wayne Ducheneaux (Cheyenne River Sioux) became President of NCAI and A. Gay Kingman (Cheyenne River Sioux) was appointed Executive Director. Their first efforts were focused on recovering the financial well-being of the organization, which meant that less attention was devoted to issues in Congress. One of the successful projects NCAI pursued during the next two years was organization and presentation of the Indian pre-conference of the White House Conference on Library and Information Science, which was held in early 1991.

The National Congress of American Indians is still active today, continuing its work of lobbying, support for tribal governments, and advocacy for American Indian issues.

Scope and Content Note

The records of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) reflect the operations of its Washington, DC, headquarters and, in particular, the activities and responsibilities of its executive director. The papers primarily cover the period 1943 to 1990, although some documents pre-dating NCAI are present. The bulk of the material relates to legislation, lobbying, and NCAI's interactions with various governmental bodies. A large segment also concerns the annual conventions and executive council and executive committee meetings. Finally, the records also document the operations of the NCAI, including personnel, financial, and fundraising material. Materials found throughout the collection include letters, memoranda, handwritten notes, speeches, press releases, newspaper clippings, publications, minutes of meetings, transcripts, reports, agenda, programs, financial records, legislative materials, photographs, and sound recordings.

Series 4: Tribal Files, 1933-1988

The Tribal Files document the activities and perspectives of the member tribes of NCAI. Included are correspondence between NCAI's Washington headquarters and the member tribes, tribal resolutions, copies of legislation, and other documentation of the interactions between NCAI and the tribes. Also included in this series are inter-tribal organizations with which NCAI worked and material on miscellaneous tribal issues.

This series is arranged alphabetically by tribe, band or reservation, there under by date. All bands within a tribal group are filed together (for example, Jicarilla Apache and White Mountain Apache are both found under Apache). There are four subseries: Individual Tribes, Bands & Reservations; Inter-Tribal Organizations; Special Issues (dealing with the Hopi-Navajo land dispute in the 1970s); and Miscellaneous Tribal Files.

Series 5: Records of Indian Interest Organizations, 1948-1987

The Records of Indian Interest Organizations series contains material regarding other organizations working on issues relating to American Indians. The records, including correspondence, publications, and clippings, document both the activities of these groups themselves and their relationships with NCAI.

This series is divided into three subseries: Other Indian Organizations, composed of other Indian member organizations such as Native American Rights Fund (NARF); Non-Indian Support Groups, organizations founded for the purpose of aiding Indians such as the Association of American Indian Affairs (AAIA); and General Interest Groups, only part of whose work was made up of Indian issues.

Series 6: NCAI Committees and Special Issues Files, 1934-1989

The NCAI Committees and Special Issues Files are by far the largest series in the collection. This material illustrates much of NCAI's substantive work on issues affecting Indians, including their lobbying activity, working with governmental entities, research, and educational activities such as publications and conferences. The series contains both records generated by NCAI staff, such as reports, memoranda, and correspondence, and a large amount of background material created by outside entities.

There are 20 subseries, some of which are further divided into sub-subseries: Alaskan Natives; Policy Conference; Religious Freedom and Related Cultural Concerns; Hunting and Fishing Rights; Natural Resources and Indian Water Rights; Nuclear Waste; Solar Bank; AIMS (American Indian Media Surveillance) Committee; HCR 108 and Federal Termination Policies; Emergency Conference of 1954; Jurisdiction --NCAI Commission and Federal Legislation; Law Enforcement; Litigation Committee; Annual Litigation Conference; Trail of Broken Treaties Impact Survey Team; Block Grants; Health and Welfare; Self-Determination and Education; National Conference on Federal Recognition; and Economic and Reservation Development (unprocessed).

Series 7: United Effort Trust (UET), 1977-1980

The United Effort Trust (UET) Files document the activities of the UET, a project designed to combat white backlash to American Indian rights. UET was formed in 1977 by a coalition of Native American groups, including NCAI, and was led by former NCAI Executive Director Charles E. "Chuck" Trimble. Included in this series are correspondence, memoranda, reports, speeches and public statements, press releases, newspaper clippings, pamphlets, and policy papers.

There are eight subseries: NCAI and NTCA Joint Committee; Issues; Legislation; News Releases; Indian Organizations; Inter-Tribal Organizations; Non-Indian Organizations; and Tribes.

Series 8: Attorneys and Legal Interest Groups, 1947-1984

The Attorneys and Legal Interest Groups series documents both NCAI's legal representation and issues involving American Indians and lawyers more generally. The Attorneys subseries consists primarily of correspondence and memoranda from NCAI's lawyers. The Legal Interest Groups subseries documents organizations around the country that provided legal services to Native communities. The Legal Services subseries deals mostly with Congressional reauthorization and funding of the Legal Services Corporation, a federal agency that provides legal services; these records derive from Suzan Shown Harjo's work at the Native American Rights Fund, and include other documents from her work there.

Series 9: Federal Indian Policy and Legislation Files, 1974-1977

The Federal Indian Policy and Legislation Files cover a wide range of federal policy issues, including both legislative and administrative action, and NCAI's activities in the legislative process. Much material on federal policy can be found elsewhere in the collection, under specific topics. The issues included in this series are often more general in nature, such as budget and appropriations, or may not correspond with other areas of NCAI activity. This series also includes information pertaining to US trust responsibilities, including right-of-way over Indian land issues, submarginal lands, acquisition of new land by the Dept. of Interior for Indian tribes, heirship, and allotments.

Only the first series has been processed, the records of the American Indian Policy Review Task Force. The American Indian Policy Review Commission was established by Congress in 1975 to conduct a comprehensive study of the relationship between Indians and the federal government. It established 11 task forces to study particular areas, and many NCAI members and officers served on those task forces. This subseries documents the establishment and work of the Commission and the task forces, and NCAI's support of their activities.

Series 18: "Give-away" Files

General note

Unprocessed material. Information forthcoming.

Series 19: Publications, 1958-1990

The Publications series includes an incomplete run of the Sentinel in its various manifestations plus a small sampling of NCAI's other publications, large and small. The Sentinel (also known as the News/Sentinel and the Sentinel Bulletin) was the first periodical issued by NCAI, beginning in the 1940s. A monthly publication at the beginning, it contained official NCAI news, important tribal news and editorials. In later years, the Sentinel was published less frequently and less regularly. The earliest issues in this collection are from 1958, with the most consistent coverage from the late 1970s and 1980s. Many other NCAI publications, such as two shorter-lived newsletters, are not represented in this collection. For some, such as the Environmental Handbook and Tribal Government, there are copies of the final drafts but no published versions. A number of publications, such as copies of the constitution and conference programs, have been added to the series to which they relate.

Series 20: Photographs

487 negatives (photographic)

1,941 photographs

Location note: All of the prints are located in the photo archives cool storage. The negatives are located in cold storage in one box.

The photographs in this series have been divided into two subseries, "Portraits" and "Events" which are both organized alphabetically. Most of the portraits are headshots and photographs of NCAI staff and leaders as well as political figures and tribal leaders with whom NCAI maintained relationships. The events series contains photographs from events hosted by NCAI and attended by NCAI staff. Events include annual conventions, meetings with congressional leaders, benefits and workshops as well as national conferences related to the work of NCAI. A majority of these event photos are from the mid 1950s and 1960s and are well identified. The photographs from these years feature leaders such as Helen Peterson, Joseph Garry, Clarence Wesley, Geroge Frank as well as many others. There are a smaller amount of photographs from conventions and events in the 1970's and early 1980's which are for the most part unidentified. Though the majority of photographs are prints there is also a smaller amount of negatives.
