This Indian Country: American Indian Activists and the Place They Made

Join noted historian Frederick E. Hoxie—winner of 2012's American Indian History Lifetime Achievement Award—for an illustrated presentation about his new book, which tells a story of political activism with victories hard-won in courts and campaigns rather than on the battlefield. As Indian tribal leaders, lawyers, activists, and commentators sought to bridge the distance between indigenous cultures and the republican democracy of the United States through legal and political debate, they profoundly shaped the modern political landscape. In the process of defining a new language of "Indian rights" and creating a vision of American Indian identity, they entered into a dialogue with other activist movements, from African American civil rights movements to women's rights and other progressive organizations. A book signing will follow the presentation.
